LOCAL AGENTS WANTED.

We desire to procure the services of a local agent in every Postoffice District in the State. Will our friends act, or procure the services of some efficient person in our behalf? Believing that the circulation of the Democrat may be materially extended, we make this appeal to our friends in its behalf.

WE publish this morning, in detail, an account of the treatment a Union man received from a Federal Co'nel whilst his regiment was encamped near this city. The subject of this treatment is an old citizen of this county, and there is no more loyal man in it; and he is none the less so notwithstanding the infamous conduct of a Colonel who disgraces the service of the United States by trampling State laws under foot. It is time it was understood that such conduct in this State must cease. Kentucky will not surrender the Federal Government whilst she has any power left; but she is equally resolved to support her own laws and Constitution. That is the duty of every loyal man. The Governor is sworn to support the Constitution of this State, and that instrument makes it his duty to see that the laws of the State are faithfully executed. It is true that forbearance is necessary to avoid collisions between the State and Federal authorities, and Kentucky and her citizens have exercised this forbearance as fully as could be demanded of her; and we can inform those who come here to steal negroes, under the pretext of putting down the rebellion, that they are not done with trouble on this score.

There is no military necessity to be invoked here, no law to screen such conduct, and nothing but power will save the guilty. It is not the purpose of the Federal Government to protect such conduct in this Commonwealth.

In the confusion and pressure of business in this city, some time ago, when these transactions took place, the guilty escaped, and one of our citizens had to suffer by the loss of his servants; but law and order will yet prevail, and the execution of the laws.

Enticing negroes away, and forcing them away, has been a practice in this Commonwealth. The excuse is often made that the owner was Seeces. No excuse at all that. To assume guilt upon rumor, as an excuse to commit depredations, would be convenient for every rogue in the State.

These slaves ought to be returned to the owner, and the ill conduct rebuked by the military themselves. It is due to the State that such wrongs be rectified. Laws are not to be supported by overriding law.

GEORGE N. SANDERS, it is said, has brought encouraging news from England to his friends in Richmond. George is the veritable, reliable man so much in said about. He once brought us better news from the Southern Confederacy, when he crossed sat at Montgomery, than he can now bring from England. He is one of the men who seems to deceive himself more than other people. He conceives vast projects, and nurses them with great assiduity, and gets on just far enough to fail.

He is the worst failure we know of, and seems to be aware of it; as if he were born one; for however he may be defeated, he never seems disappointed, but is only the more ready to engage in something else. He is, moreover, the policy man par excellence. His faith is in policy. He would ride the solar system by some scheme or plan. He will persuade part of the Government at Richmond to hold out for the help to come from England; but it will fail—fail, for Sanders has put his fingers in it, and he is sure to fail.

He put in for the old man of Wheatland, and seemed to succeed; for Buchanan was nominated and elected President of the United States. But it all turned out the most signal failure George ever made. He has one merit valuable to himself. No matter how often or how much he fails, he will turn up again somewhere.

It was thought, when he made his way from Nashville afoot, that he would not recover, for he was in a dilapidated condition; but he has been to London. How he got there has been explained, and it shows the resources of his genius; but how he got back and got to Richmond is yet a mystery. We hope he will send us an account of his adventures, that we may publish them in the Democrat for his old friends to read. Let him do this, quit Seeces and quiet policy, and maybe the Lord will forgive him if man doesn't.

GEORGE GREELEY, of the Tribune, didn't promise nine hundred thousand troops for war on slavery. He promised three times three hundred thousand. It was a mere rhetorical number, and might be more or less. So far it is composed of a single drafted man, and he pleads conscience against bearing arms.

GEORGE LETCHER, that will be the worse if the radicals want to know the influence that beat them, let them read the private letters written by the soldiers to their friends at home. These have wrought many conversions.

The Boston Post says the Queen of Naples is more of a man than her husband.

REASON IN FAYETTE COUNTY, KENTUCKY.—At the special November term of the Fayette Circuit Court, which closed its labors on Saturday week, two hundred and fifteen indictments were brought in by the Grand Jury, two hundred and eight of which were for treason.

A COSTLY VOTE.—Martin Ryan, of Webster, New York, for casting an illegal vote, has been fined one hundred dollars and costs.

LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY: SUNDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 23, 1862.

NUMBER 82.

(For the Louisville Sunday Democrat.)
"COME UNTO ME."

Art thou weary heavy laden?
And thy cross too hard to bear?
Is thy pathway all encompassed
With thorns?—then shun the snares!
There no flood's ever now,
Butts covered, all the long year,
With the pure, white, freezing snow?
Wearisome—“Come unto Me.”

Desert stretch before thee,
Barren earth and unloved trees?
Does the eye's vain wander?
For some with beauty rare?
Does thy path lead through water,
With steep sides, deep, dark, and low?
In vain, crave cooling streams?
Thrashing one—“Come unto Me.”

Then winter, sad and dreary,
Friendsless and unloved—desire?
With no loving tongue to blesse thee,
No loved hand to guide thine own?
Is the heart forever longing?
For a kindly word or tone?
But no voice to cheer thee?
As then joyneynesse—“Come unto Me.”

Friend—“Oh! ‘Come unto Me.’”

Then winter, sad and dreary,
Friendsless and unloved—desire?

With no loving tongue to blesse thee,
No loved hand to guide thine own?
Is the heart forever longing?
For a kindly word or tone?
But no voice to cheer thee?
As then joyneynesse—“Come unto Me.”

Friend—“Oh! ‘Come unto Me.’”

Then winter, sad and dreary,
Friendsless and unloved—desire?

With no loving tongue to blesse thee,
No loved hand to guide thine own?

STONEWALL JACKSON A POET.

(From the Richmond Examiner, Nov. 8.)
Doubtless it will surprise many to learn that the obstinate and hardy warrior, Stonewall Jackson, is a poet of no little ability, and that among the busy scenes and arduous duties of camp he has found leisure to gratify his taste for the beautiful in literature. The following lines were written while Jackson was an artillery officer in Mexico, during the war between the United States and that country:

MY WIFE AND CHILD.

The tattoo beats—the lights are gone,
The stars are dimmed, the moon is low,
The night with solemn peace moves on,
The shadows chicken of the skies;
But still the heart is full of rest,
And sad, uneasy thoughts arise.

I think of thee, oh, dearest one—
How lovely my early life hath been!

Of those we loved, how fondly we used to dream—
Who shimmers on the gentle breast;

God's tender, frail and lone,

Our love, though strong, was but a rest,

And hour, never more.

To her, whose watchful eye is wet—
To mother, wife—the daily dove;

In her, whose smile has always met
Two strongs of love so deep and dear,

And cheer her drooping spirits yet.

Now, while she kneels before thy throne,
Oh, how I long to be with her again!

That, while by thy bosom she lies,
The brightening current of her breast,

She loves me not, nor any one,

From every danger, every tie,

Oh, God! protect us both!

Trial Trip of the Naugatuck.

The United States Stevens battery Naugatuck made a trial trip up the river on Monday to test the qualities of her new gun, which is to succeed that which burst at Fort Darling.

Mr. Richardson, partner of Gen. James, the rifled cannon inventor (now deceased), Capt. Norris of the revenue service, Capt. Wilson and the officers of the Naugatuck were on board.

The vessel left Hoboken at two o'clock p. m., and started up the river. It was raining heavily. Arrived at the Palisades, steam was shut off, and ten pounds of powder—the regular charge is twelve or fourteen—was put in the gun, with the shot weighing 104 lbs. The discharge was satisfactory, the ball entering the earth with a noise striking the water. It was elevated a little.

The second shot was elevated about sixty degrees and was intended to strike as high up on the earthen wall as possible. It struck some short distance from the top and burst. The recoil of the gun was not more than about fourteen inches at any time. There was but one new principle involved in the experiment, which was chiefly intended to try how the new gun worked and the vessel's general arrangements, which have been improved since her arrival here.

The new principle alluded to is an indicator apparatus for checking the recoil of guns. It is of an ingenious nature and admirably answered the purpose for which it was intended. Of course an analytical exposition of it would be improper at present.

The new gun of the Naugatuck is a regular navy 42-pounder, which was rifled at the James establishment. It is strengthened by a brass re-enforcement cast over the breech, and is about 5 inches thick and 30 inches long. The piece itself weighs about 6 or 7 tons. The one that burst weighed about 5 tons. After the trial, the vessel returned to her anchorage, where she will remain for a few days.

The Naugatuck does not belong to the navy. She is in the service of the Treasury Department, and flies the revenue flag. When she was presented to the Government by Mr. James, she was to be used as she would be put into active hostile service, as is desired by the builder that the plan on which she is constructed should get a fair trial under fire. There is no iron armor on this vessel. Her hull is iron up to the main deck. In action she is submerged so as to be almost on a level with the water. Between the spar or top deck and lower platforms there are from two to three feet of water. This water is the armor. A shot striking the deck is supposed to ricochet and pass away. The upper works on the spar deck are not necessary, being intended for officer's comfort. There are two of James' brass rifled 12-pounds on the top deck. The barrel of the gun, however, is supposed to be right ready and willing to be led against the rebel army.

The report of the latter General had promised the people of Savannah to capture Fort Pulaski about the 17th instant, and after some maneuvering in camp. Our forces in that fort and vicinity are plenty large enough to defend themselves against any army Beauregard can bring against it, and they are only wishing that the rebel General will attempt to carry out his promise.

Contrabands from the interior of the State are arriving at Port Royal every day. They state that the people are in a terrible state of excitement, thinking that our soldiers will advance on them immediately. They have no confidence in their defenders, and they are sending all their property, horses included, far away into the interior and to other states, where they will be more secure. The towns of Savannah and Charleston, especially the latter, are strongly fortified both by the land and water, yet the people dread an encounter with our soldiers and monitors. They state that they will burn to the ground both cities before they will surrender them.

Philadelphia Press, 19th.

Arrival of the Steamer De Soto, from Port Royal, at this Port.

The United States steamer De Soto, 1,600 tons burden and mounting nine guns, commanded by Capt. W. H. Walker, arrived at this port last evening, having left Port Royal on the 1st instant. She brings no news of starting importance.

The malice which prevailed there extensively at the time of the last departure from that port, and which had caused the death of General Mitchell and other officers, had in a great measure departed, and the excitement incident to the breaking out of contagious diseases had almost subsided. Ever since the death of General Mitchell an almost impenetrable gloom has hung over the countenances of our soldiers, yet they are making immense preparations for the campaign which they are to take in that behalf.
